

Syriac-English DICTIONARY

for “Classical Syriac” by Arman Akopian

Syriac-English Dictionary

The dictionary contains all of the Syriac words used in this book, as well as numerous frequently used ones that were not included in the texts. It contains nearly all the words that appear in the New Testament, except for personal names mentioned no more than once.

For ease of use, the dictionary follows the alphabetical order. Therefore, the 'Ap^sel, 'Etp^sel, 'Etpa^sal, and 'Ettap^sal verbs are listed under ālap.

The nouns and adjectives are listed in the emphatic state. The irregular or unpredictable absolute forms of nouns and adjectives are included in round brackets. In cases where construct and absolute state forms are not the same, the absolute form is indicated first, followed by the construct form.

In the same manner, the round brackets contain only the irregular plural forms (identifiable by syāme). If both the absolute state and plural forms are indicated, then the absolute (and construct) forms come first, followed by the plural form. Multiple plural forms all follow the slash separated by commas (the same applies to absolute and construct forms). Thus, the word ܐܘܢܐ is followed by the following words in brackets: (ܐܘܢܐܘܢܐ, ܐܘܢܐܘܢܐܘܢܐ, ܐܘܢܐܘܢܐܘܢܐܘܢܐ, ܐܘܢܐܘܢܐܘܢܐܘܢܐܘܢܐ), where ܐܘܢܐ – the construct, and the other four words separated by commas are the plural forms.

The square brackets after the P^sal verbs contain the 3rd person masc. sing. form of the future tense: ܘܢܐܘܢܐ [ܘܢܐܘܢܐ]. With the verbs of other stems, the square brackets contain the name of the stem and the corresponding P^sal verb: ܘܢܐܘܢܐ [ܘܢܐܘܢܐ < ܘܢܐܘܢܐ], i.e. the Pa^sel verb ܘܢܐܘܢܐ formed from the P^sal verb ܘܢܐܘܢܐ. In certain cases, the brackets contain a verbal root, which can be recognized by the absence of vowel-signs; this means that the root does not form a P^sal verb. If the verb is formed from a noun, that noun is mentioned in the brackets instead of a P^sal verb or a root.
